Description

This may be easier said than done.

It is possible to have multiple invites for the same group. It's also possible to join the group without accepting the invite (ie a person could request membership and be joined that way).

The request is to remove all invitations to a group if the person joins the group by any means (whether accepting an invitation or requesting membership).

A corollary that I have not tested is to remove all invitations if one of multiple invites is rejected.

Chris, to be clear, you have confirmed that this doesn't already happen? I believe that BuddyPress does clear its own invitations if you join the group separately, but it's possible that our custom system does not.

I've confirmed the behavior and in

<https://github.com/cuny-academic-commons/cac-onboarding/commit/4de95e5b31b7e7db6b27abb2e17cc0687ae1c549> I added some cleanup routines. Now, if you join a group or a site using a mechanism other than invitation acceptance, all your invitations related to that group will be cleaned accordingly.
