CUNY Academic Commons - Bug #15135

Header design spacing

Description

I'm seeing a few things off on the homepage when I look at the header:

-- the top black admin bar (what we used to call the BP-admin bar) is overlapping "Open Educational" and "Project," each of which is too far away from the main nav bar headings they are supposed to be paired with

-- there should be more horizontal space between the right edge of the CAC logo and the word "People"

-- separately, I'm wondering whether we meant to have all of those terms on the main nav bar? I think we had slimmed that down a bit, no? And that it should match the simplified nav in the top drop-down (see attached screenshot)

- Category name set to Toolbar

- Target version set to 1.19.1

The "separately" thing seems like the high priority item, so I opened a separate ticket #15136.

The visual issues you note are quite old. We can try to look at them for the next release.

I guess I should clarify: the specific things in your bullet points are all related to #15136, and should be fixed by it.

Your first screenshot shows the general ugliness of the 'Commons' hover menu, which was how I first read this ticket. I'll fix the hover states and misaligned arrow for the next release.

- Status changed from Assigned to Staged for Production Release

I've updated the styling in https://github.com/cuny-academic-commons/cac/commit/91f6758f36473716e2bde68782b4d02b09d8fa83 so it's consistent with other toolbar items.
