Description

Lizzie Macauley writes:
"I have had my students design websites over the last few years. Many of them have graduated but I still have access to the sites - how can I either delete them (since I have access to 33 websites) or remove my access. "

I couldn't see how to do this (and also thought the sites shouldn't be entirely removed), so I wrote to Scott, who replied:
"I also don't see how you can do this site by site (also would be a pain to do for 33 sites). Perhaps Boone can help. I think permissions can be removed globally with an SQL - but not sure. I don't think we should delete the sites, but just remove Lizzie's access."

Any advice, Boone? Thanks!

Just a gentle nudge here, Lizzie is patient but I don't want this to get lost. Thanks!

There's currently no way for users to do this themselves.

I can do it manually. Marilyn, can you first please verify the user's Commons username?
