Description

I tried to add Sarah (username="Sarah_Morgano") to the Codex blog as an admin user, but was unsuccessful. I got a lot of conflicting error messages - usernames should not contain "_", only lowercase allowed, username already exists, email address is not allowed, email address already exists). This seems to be a bug and the error msgs don't make sense - I change the case to lower and still get the error. I eliminate the underscore - and it says the user already exists. But the it says below that (obviously) the user must exist to be granted access. I am attaching a screenshot. Thanks

Hi Scott,

We do need to figure out an easier way to add users to blogs (I'll create a separate ticket for that). Can you create a separate ticket to ask for more detailed error messages?

The issue is that both the username and email have to match what the member has associated with the account. In this case, the email address attached to Sarah's account is brooklyntechie@gmail.com, not her gc address. try that and let me know how it goes.

Hi Matt - Yes, that seemed to work - I entered Sarah_Morgano (with caps and underscores) and the email address you gave, and it went right through. Thanks. I will open up a different ticket for clearer error messages. I will mark this ticket resolved
