Hi Boone
Looks like issue 2844 is cropping up again in the digital fellows group. Screenshot attached

From the original ticket
The news feed in our GC Digital Fellows Commons group had several messages today that said I had edited blog posts yesterday. It also sent out notifications to all admins of the blog that I had made edits. But I had not edited these posts. Laura Kane (who is also an admin for this blog) had made some changes, but we do not know why the changes showed up under my name instead of hers. Is this a bug?
Here's the blog URL: http://digitalfellows.commonsgc.cuny.edu/

Is someone going through and editing these posts manually? Trying to figure if we are looking at one bug or two.

I believe so based on the fact that I see a digital fellow (Ian Phillips, who has been working on the site) has been active on the Commons, and the notifications are from all members of team

- Status changed from New to Resolved

See <https://redmine.gc.cuny.edu/issues/5877#note-3>. The original fix was removed in <https://github.com/cuny-academic-commons/cac/commit/d7cf28ee51d7b60d81f272396a03eaba82b6a1ec> for some reason - I assume it was a mistake. Ray's referenced in #5877 has now been ported to the 1.9.x branch, and I'll deploy it as a hotfix so we can stop any more of these in-progress notifications from being sent out.
